Create your own home page that will be placed on the Web. The layout and content of your Web page are entirely up to you. You are encouraged to be creative and produce a document that you are proud to display to the world.

At a bare minimum, your page must provide the following:

Part 1 (1 points)
- Your page should have at least two different parts, one containing some personal information (like your name, where you're from, etc.), and another a set of links. You should include both internal links (that jump to locations within the info page) and external links that would lead to other pages on the web (like something related to one of your hobbies, etc). Your info page must have your name prominently centered at the top.
- There should be several sections to the info page (e.g., Personal Info, Hobbies, Favorite Links), each with its own heading. At least one section must have multiple paragraphs in it.

Part 2 (2 points)
- Your info page should perform some text formatting (bold, italics, color, BIG) but try not to overdue it to the point that the content is compromised.
- You should include a favorite quote, e.g., a poem or line from a movie.
- There should be at least one list (e.g., your top-ten favorite CDs).
- There should be at least 5 links in the page, including a link to the University of Bristol and to the COMPS12302 home page. At least one of those links must occur in a sentence.

Part 3 (2 points)
- There must be at least one table, some of whose rows are more than one line long.
- The page's last modification date should be automatically displayed at the bottom. (Use JavaScript here.)
